bhāṣyatām. Though bhāṣyatām is the more grammatically correct form, bhāṣatu is well-attested in Buddhist Sanskrit. Neither form occurs elsewhere in the parts of the work which are Āryadeva's own writing, though it does occur frequently in cited quotations, wherein bhāṣatu is the form consistently used.

9 vedhe ] akṣūṇa.] C 'kṣūṇa. ; A akṣaṇa. (n.b. lack of vowel sandhi native to both MSS). It is not clear which reading is preferable.
Regarding this term, Edgerton (BHSD, p. 3) notes that "all the mss. in the Divy akṣūṇa., or akṣūṇa. ; ed. always akṣūṇa.," and he prefers the reading akṣaṇa., asserting that the former readings are "hyper.Skt. for Pali akkhaṇa... which really derives from Skt. ākhaṇa, target." The Tibetan translation, mi 'chor ba, is presumably based on the reading akṣūṇa., as found in MS C. I have chosen to follow the reading akṣūṇa., as this reading is also found in MS A subsequently.

9 kalpayitvā] Pn inserts narakam vā, which fits the discursive pattern. However, it is not found in either B, C, or TIB. This may be an early, common error, or it may be native to the author's text (perhaps an authorial error). Presuming it to be the latter, rather than the former, I have not emended here, though a good case can be made for doing so.

5 *] The extant Sanskrit text (MS B) begins its citation at this point.

As this passage falls in one of the lacunae in MS C, we have only this witness upon which to rely. I think it highly likely that C would have confirmed this, as the Subhāṣita.saṅgraha (which is largely based on the CMP, and copies its scriptural quotations frequently) also cites this passage of the LAS from here. The Tibetan translation, however, cites more of the text at the beginning. The passage quoted in the Tibetan (as found in Nanjio) reads : mahākaruṇopāya.kauśalyānābhoga.gatena mahāmate prayogeṇa sarvasattvadhātu.māyāpratibimba.samatayā anārabdha.pratyayatayā adhyātma.bāhya.viśaya.vimuktatayā citta.bāhyādarśanatayā animittādhiṣṭhānānugatā. The text preserved in MS B renders the subjects and verbs (plural in the sūtra) in the singular. Thus, if the above passage were native to the CMP, the final word would presumably animittādhiṣṭhānānugato

[ 'nupūrveṇa].

NOTE: Though I had intended to include comprehensive English-Sanskrit-Tibetan glossaries here, as a contribution to the further development of esoteric Buddhist lexicography, limitations of space and time have rendered this impracticable. § 827

A tilde (~) before Tibetan entries indicates an attested equivalent that I judge to be either erroneous or imperfect. § 828
