The text of the Johnston edition was transliterated on the basis ↪ of a cursory reading; the typed input was compared with the edition by ↪ Cowell, partly as a routine of proof--reading, partly in order to be able to add variant ↪ readings from the older edition. (The conventions for inputting variants are described ↪ below.) Proof--reading and insertion of variants was done "manually" and I (Peter ↪ Schreiner) do not guarantee completeness. The additional passages in Cowell at the ↪ beginning of the poem were not transliterated completely, and the additional ↪ chapters at the end were not transliterated at all. The published edition from which this e-text was transcribed is ↪ printed in the Devanāgarī script. The electronic text below is in a lossless ↵ transliteration using the Latin alphabet. The transliteration scheme used is the IAST ↵ (<ref ta↵ rget="http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/International_Alphabet_of_Sanskrit_Transliteration ↵ International Alphabet of Sanskrit Transliteration</ref>).

 ↵ IAST differs in small ways from ISO 15919, but is preferred by most working ↵ Sanskrit scholars.

Conversion of this file to ISO 15919 can be achieved by ↵ performing the following replacements throughout the file: <code> r -&gt; r and m -&gt; ; ↵ m </code>

 <normalization>
Annotations, remarks etc. by the editor of the transliteration ↵ are enclosed in square brackets.  Annotations by the editor(s) of the edition which served as ↵ source of the transliteration (e.g. conjectures, markers for lacunae etc.) ↵ which are part of the printed edition are enclosed in pointed parentheses.  Colophons which are part of the printed edition are enclosed ↵ by double square brackets.  </normalization> <interpretation> Sandhi  The "principle of transliteration" has been that the input ↵ format should reproduce the letters of the printed text as closely as possible, ↵ i.e., that one types what one sees. However, markers are added (in the ↵ transliteration) to what is printed (in Devanāgarī) to indicate that fact that a printed ↪ (and consequently typed) letter has undergone some sandhi change.

A sandhi change is defined with regard to the "pausa form" of ↪ a word, i.e. the form a word would take at the end of a line or out of context ↪ (vigraha). Note that this paua form need not be identical with the stem which ↪ would be entered in a dictionary.

Thus, (final and initial) consonants which have undergone a ↪ sandhi change in the text are marked by "*". Similarly, final vowels which have ↪ changed due to sandhi are marked by "*" (e.g., "āśīd* rājā nalo* nāma").

 In case of vowel sandhi the sandhi is dissolved and marked ↪ (e.g., na*asti, ca*eva). Similarly, avagraha is reconstituted, the originally ↪ omitted initial "a"

being marked as sandhi vowel (e.g., devo* *api).  In some special cases the marking of sandhi has to be ↪ extended to include some disambiguating information:

<list>

<item>-- to half--vowels which substitute for a long vowel the ↪ diacritic for "long vowel" (-) is added (e.g., devy-* api);</item> <item> -- if final -ā in sandhi does not stand for -āḥ (with ↪ visarga), then the original vowel which has been substituted by the -ā is ↪ added (e.g., lokae*

eva, where "loka eva" is printed, which is the sandhi form ↪ for "loke eva").</item>

</list>

&lt;/p&gt;

In case of "double sandhi" the sandhi is marked by double ↵ "/*", e.g., sa**eva in case of "saiva" instead of "sa* eva").

Blank is inserted between words wherever this is possible in ↵ transliteration

(though not necessarily in Devanāgarī), e.g., "hy* api", "nalo* ↵ *api".

Compounds

Another feature which exceeds what might be expected from a ↵ straightforward transliteration is the separation of nominal compounds.

↪ Separation of compounds is marked by inserting + between the members of a compound

↪ (e.g., brahma+purāṇa, buddha+carita). In case of sandhi, the + functions also as ↪ sa.mdhi--marker, i.e.

no additional sandhi--marker is added (e.g., tapo+vane, ↪ mahā+ātmanah).

Separation of compounds is restricted to nominal compounds ↪ (including upapāda--compounds like ura+ga, go+pī) and does not include ↪ grammatical analysis.

For details, special cases etc. see the introduction to Sanskrit

↪ Indices and Text of the Brahmapurāṇa, Wiesbaden 1987, p. xvi--xvii, by P.

↪ Schreiner and R.

So"hnēn.

Variae lectio[n]es Variants

The beginning of the passage for which a variant exists is ↪ marked by opening parenthesis. In deciding about the extension of the text thus ↪ marked, the changes generated for the text format had to be taken into ↪ consideration. This meant that occasionally words which are identical in the base text and in ↪ the variant are included in the parentheses, since in the text format (sa.mhita) ↪ the beginning of a variant could not be printed if that word is joined to the ↪ preceding word in vowel sandhi. Thus we write "... (mahā+ātmā Xmahā+puruṣah) ↪ ...", even though the "mahā+" is identical in both versions. The beginning of the variant is marked by a siglum, viz. by a ↪ single capital letter (capital letters are used exclusively for that purpose in the transliteration). Several sigla are separated by a comma (no ↪ blank) -- which does not occur in this file of course. There is no blank between the ↪ siglum and the variant.

If there are several variants for the same passage of the base ↪ text, they are listed sequentially. The variant (or the last variant if there is ↪ more than one) is closed by the closing parenthesis. The blank before the next ↪ word is considered to belong to the variant and is put inside the parentheses. The ↪ continuation of the base text follows without intermediate blank.

 Schematic pattern: <list> <item>(... A... )...</item> <item> (... A,B... )...</item> <item> (... A... B... )...</item> </list>

Interpolations

Interpolations are treated as "variants without base text", i.e.
↪ siglum follows immediately upon the opening parenthesis. The siglum is ↵ repeated before the closing parenthesis which marks the end of the interpolation.

 ↵ This allows for the input of variants within interpolations which are attested in ↵ more than one source.

Long interpolations may be entered as a sequence of separate ↵ interpolations (e.g., verse by verse). Interpolated lines are (may be) marked by "X" ↵ at the beginning of the line (which is meant to mark "star"--passages as e.g., in the ↵ critical edition of the MBh).

 Omissions

 Passages from the base text which are omitted in any of the ↵ variant texts are marked by double parentheses plus siglum enclosing the ↵ omitted passage (which may also be individual words).

 <refsDecl> The full reference (chapter and verse) is given at the end of the ↵ verse to which it refers. (While transliterating the full reference needs to be typed ↵ only for the first verse of each chapter.) The reference consists of two figures ↵ separated by a (single) dot. The first number refers to the chapter, the second ↵ number refers to the verse--number within the chapter.

The beginning of references is marked by double exclamation ↪ mark (i.e. danda) and the end is marked by a single exclamation mark. Always after a ↪ reference a new line begins.

</refsDecl>

Application information

The input and processing of the transliterated text has been done ↪ with TUSTEP, the

Tuebingen System of Text--Processing Programs.

The TUSTEP format includes a reference number in front of every ↪ record ; this machine reference has been calculated in such a way that it agrees with the ↪ textual reference.

In the ASCII--format of the input file this machine reference is ↪ lost.

 Some of the tools for textual analysis which can be produced from ↪ the input format have been published for the Brahmapurāṇa : Peter Schreiner, Renate ↪ Soehnen : Sanskrit Indices

and Text of the Brahmapurāṇa. Wiesbaden : Otto Harrassowitz, ↪ 1987.

The following list gives a survey of programs (German names in ↪ parentheses) developed for the processing of our input : <list>

<item>Any of the transliterated versions (i.e. ed. Johnston or ed.
↪ Cowell) can be extracted (GRUNDTEXTKOP, VARTEXTKOP)</item>

<item>The machine references in TUSTEP are calculated from the ↪ references in the text

(REFRECHNEN).</item>

<item>The text format (i.e. the conventionally transliterated text with compounds and sandhis reconstituted) can be generated ↪ (TEXTFORM). This

version can be processed for output in Devanāgarī with ↪ programs which work on the basis of transliterated input (e.g., TeX).</item>

<item>The pauṣa format of the text is generated by changing all ↳ the characters marked by * or + according to the sandhi rules of Sanskrit grammar.

 ↳ Each word appears in the phonetic form which it would assume at the end of a line
